psychoanalysis enjoyed an enormous popularity at one time but has recently fallen out of favor as new psychiatric medications have dominated the treatment of mental illness and a new interest in the brain and neuroscience begins to dominate the theory as to the cause and cure of mental illness how do we distinguish between the brain the mind and the self in his new book arnold goldberg approaches this question from a psychoanalytic perspective and examines how recent research findings can shed light on it he repositions psychoanalysis as an interpretive science that is a different activity to most other sciences that are considered empirical giving clear coverage of the various psychoanalytic models of the mind and the self goldberg examines how these theories fare against neuroscientific evidence and what implications these have for psychoanalytic clinical practice the brain the mind and the self a psychoanalytic road map sets up evidence based robust psychoanalytic theory and practice that will give psychoanalysts social workers and practicing psychologists a valuable insight into the future of psychoanalysis arnold goldberg md was born and raised in chicago and trained at the university of illinois michael reese hospital and the institute for psychoanalysis in chicago he is recently retired from the cynthia oudejans harris md chair and professor of psychiatry at rush medical center

it s hard to conceive of a topic of more broad and personal interest than the study of the mind in addition to its traditional investigation by the disciplines of psychology psychiatry and neuroscience the mind has also been a focus of study in the fields of philosophy economics anthropology linguistics computer science molecular biology education and literature in all these approaches there is an almost universal fascination with how the mind works and how it affects our lives and our behavior studies of the mind and brain have crossed many exciting thresholds in recent years and the study of mind now represents a thoroughly cross disciplinary effort researchers from a wide range of disciplines seek answers to such questions as what is mind how does it operate what is consciousness this encyclopedia brings together scholars from the entire range of mind related academic disciplines from across the arts and humanities social sciences life sciences and computer science and engineering to explore the multidimensional nature of the human mind uses the brain s five major learning systems emotional social cognitive physical and reflective to provide a framework for designing lessons and determining teaching approaches
